ANSWERS & MORE!

Paris and Helen - She was another man's wife, but when Paris, the "handsome, woman-mad" prince of Troy, saw Helen, the woman whom Aphrodite proclaimed the most beautiful in the world, he had to have her. Whether Helen actually existed, we'll never know, but her romantic part in the greatest epic of all time can never be forgotten.

Cleopatra and Mark Antony - Shakespeare depicts their relationship as volatile, but after they risked all in war on Rome and lost, they chose to die together in 30 BC.

Hadrian and Antinous - After Antinous drowned in the Nile (under mysterious circumstances, The devastated Hadrian proclaimed Antinous a deity, ordered a city be built in his honor and named a star after him.

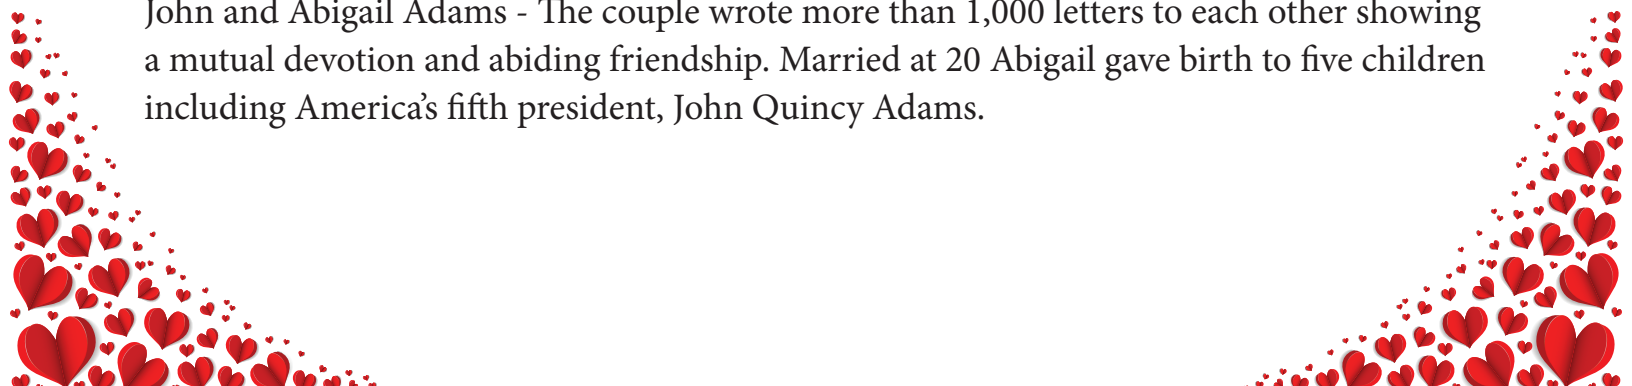

Henry II and Rosamund Clifford - Henry built a love nest to conceal their affair in a maze of a park. Henry's wife, Queen Eleanor found the center of the maze and had Rosamund put to death. Henry confined Eleanor in prison for 16 years.

Dante and Beatrice - The Italian poet Dante Alighieri wrote passionately of Beatrice in the Divine Comedy and other poems, but only met the object of his affection twice. Nonetheless, she was "the glorious lady of my mind," he wrote, and "she is my beatitude, the destroyer of all vices and the queen of virtue, salvation."

Anne Boleyn and Henry VIII - Anne refused to be a royal mistress, and the king rocked the Western world to win his divorce and make Anne queen. But we all know their love affair ended when he had her beheaded.

Louis XV of France and Madame de Pompadour - Jeanne Antoinette Poisson, dressed as a domino, danced with King Louis XV, dressed as a tree. Within weeks, the delicate beauty was maîtresse-en-titre, given the title Marquise de Pompadour.

John and Abigail Adams - The couple wrote more than 1,000 letters to each other showing a mutual devotion and abiding friendship. Married at 20 Abigail gave birth to five children including America's fifth president, John Quincy Adams.

ANSWERS & MORE!

Mary Godwin Shelley and Percy Shelley - After Percy died in a boating accident in 1822, Mary never remarried. She said having been married to a genius, she could not marry a man who wasn't one.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning and Robert Browning - They courted in secret because of her family's disapproval. She wrote, "I am not of a cold nature, & cannot bear to be treated coldly. When cold water is thrown upon a hot iron, the iron hisses." They married in 1846, living among fellow writers and artists for the rest of her life. When she died, it was in Robert Browning's arms.

John Keats and Fanny Brawne - They became secretly engaged in October 1819, but Keats soon discovered that he was suffering from tuberculosis. Brawne later married and bore three children, whom she entrusted with the intimate letters Keats had written to her.

Gertrude Stein and Alice B. Toklas - For nearly 40 years, Gertrude Stein and Alice B. Toklas were inseparable. Their love gained international fame after Stein published The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas. Wrote Stein, "One must dare to be happy."

Diego Rivera and Frida Kahlo - A volatile relationship, yet Rivera knew from early on that Kahlo "was the most important fact in my life and she would continue to be until she died 27 years later."

Wallis Simpson and King Edward VIII - The affair that shocked a nation and threw Britain's monarch into a constitutional crisis. Edward chose to abdicate the throne for his love for Simpson.

Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward - Unlike most on-set Hollywood romances, Newman and Woodward were happily devoted to one another for fifty years. The couple traded the California spotlight for Westport, Connecticut, where they raised their family.

Grace Kelly and Prince Rainier of Monaco - The wedding of the century, American film star Grace Kelly left Hollywood behind at the height of her career to wed Prince Rainier and become Princess of Monaco. He courted her through letters for some time before the couple announced their engagement in the Kelly family's Philadelphia home and married in 1956. Prince Rainier never remarried after Grace's tragic death in 1982.

J
Johnny Cash and June Carter - There isn't a more iconic country music love story than that between Johnny Cash and June Carter. Both stars in their own right, the two met backstage at the famed Grand Ole Opry. When first meeting Cash, Carter supposedly told him, "I feel like I know you already." The couple went on to tour together and fell in love, eventually marrying in 1968.

Carolyn Bessette and John F. Kennedy Jr. - Carolyn Bessette and John F. Kennedy Jr. married in a secret ceremony on a small island in Georgia, indicative of their desire to keep their relationship private from the feigning press and public attention. Sadly, their love was cut short when the couple tragically died on July 16, 1999, in a plane crash over the Atlantic ocean.

Amal and George Clooney - George Clooney was Hollywood's self-proclaimed bachelor of many decades, making his whirlwind love story with a British human rights lawyer even sweeter. After six months of dating, George proposed to the song, 'Why Shouldn't I?' while making dinner.

Meghan Markle and Prince Harry - Their life as a couple began in November 2017, when Harry popped the question while the two were roasting a chicken at their apartment in Kensington Palace. Since then, their fairytale has been untraditional, to say the least, but the love shared between the happy couple is clear.
