Flip a Coin Day

Need to make an important decision? June 1st has been designated as “Flip a Coin Day”! Originally known as “heads” or “ships,” flipping a coin is now part of our culture. Back in the Roman Empire, Julius Caesar flipped a coin when he needed decision-making assistance. It is also rumored that George Washington flipped a coin to decide whether to attack the British in Boston or New York during the Revolutionary War!

In addition to world leaders, the coin flip is now a prominent part of American football games, deciding who will take possession at the start of the game and during overtime. Coin flipping is a fun way to play the odds when making a simple choice, from which shirt to wear to which TV show to watch.

How 7-Up Got its Name

In 1929, a beverage called "Bib-Label Lithiated Lemon-Lime Soda" was introduced two weeks before the 1929 stock market crash. It had lithium citrate as an ingredient, which was believed to stabilize moods and cure hangovers. Later, it was renamed to "7Up Lithiated Soda". In 1948, the drink was again rebranded as "7Up" without lithium. The origins of the name "7Up" are still debated, and there is no official explanation available.
