National Tattoo Day

Tattooing, in one form or another, has been around for thousands of years. They can tell stories, commemorate a person or event, or simply be art—it is up to the person getting inked. Today, every city and small town has a shop or two, but there was a point in the United States' history when tattoos and tattoo shops weren't so prevalent.

The first shop in the United States was opened in 1846, with the first electric tattoo gun inspired by Thomas Edison's electric pen being introduced in 1891. By 1975, there were only 40 tattoo artists in operation, but by 1980, there were over 5,000. Talk about a big jump! Some people celebrate National Tattoo Day by getting inked, do you have ink?

Today in History

In 1988, American track and field athlete Florence Griffith Joyner set a 100-meter women's record of 10.49 at the Seoul Olympics, where she won three gold medals and set two world records, turning her into an international sensation. Joyner competed in track meets as a child.

DID YOU KNOW?

The Lost Shakespeare Play

Most of Shakespeare's work has survived centuries, and readers can still read his plays today, but the major exception seems to be Cardenio, an apparent full-length play that scholars are only aware of due to records. Some scholars believe the play, sometimes called The History of Cardenio, was based on the story of Miguel de Cervantes's Don Quixote.
