International Sceptics Day

If you're a "Doubting Thomas," well, today is your day because it's International Sceptics Day...or is it!? Just like Thomas the Apostle refused to believe that Jesus rose from the dead without actually touching His wounds, you too can choose to be skeptical about whatever you'd like today. Is the sky blue? Is the earth round? Is Elvis dead? International Sceptics Day is the day to hold tight to those things you don't quite believe.

What makes this day even more skeptical is the fact that it is observed on different days throughout the year: today, election day, and every Friday the 13th. If you love skeptics, we encourage you to celebrate all three days.

DID YOU KNOW? Herbs & Spices Aren't the Same

The terms "herbs" and "spices" are often used interchangeably, but there is a difference between the two. Herbs come from the leaves of herbaceous plants, which are those that don't have woody stalks.

Spices also come from plants, but can be harvested from any part, including the roots, bark, fruit, or seeds. For example, mint leaf is an herb, while cumin seed is a spice. Although salt is often found next to cinnamon and oregano in the grocery store, or stored with other spices, it's actually a mineral.
