National Limerick Day

They've been known as nice, naughty, silly, and perhaps even thought-provoking. Do you know a good limerick? Today is your day! May 12th is National Limerick Day, celebrating both the loveable limerick and the birthday of English artist, illustrator, author, and poet Edward Lear. Known mostly for his literary nonsense in poetry, prose, and limericks, limericks should be celebrated on Lear's birthday. Limerick poems joined the ranks of public humor when they were popularized by Edward Lear's book "Book of Nonsense" in 1846.

The Limerick celebrates fun turns of phrase, rhythm, and humor in short form, while also playing with words and people's expectations. Share your favorite limericks, or work on coming up with some of your own!

Today in History

In 1777, the 1st ice cream advertisement appeared in the New York Gazette. Even though during this time period, ice cream was reserved for the wealthy, due to the expense. It wasn't until modern refrigerators that ice cream became more cost effective.

DID YOU KNOW? Sue Ann and the Souffle

Betty White portrayed Sue Ann Nivens on the Mary Tyler Moore show from '73 - '77. White was intended as a one-time guest but became a hit, which led to a regular cast member. In the first episode, she tries to seduce Phyllis Lindstrom's (Cloris Leachman) husband, leading to tension as Phyllis and Sue Ann film a cooking segment about a chocolate soufflé. The morning after that episode Moore came to White's doorstep with a real-life soufflé.
