National Physician Assistant Day

In 1965, Dr. Eugene Stead of Duke Medical Center created the profession that we now know as physician assistants or PAs. Two years later, on October 6, 1967, the first PAs graduated from Duke University, and since then, tens of thousands of people have carried on this very important profession. PAs make healthcare more accessible, seeing over 10.4 million patients weekly. PAs work in all medical settings and specialties, bringing essential care to patients everywhere.

PAs are invaluable aids to physicians and general practitioners, so today and every October 6th, it's important that we celebrate and recognize them. Tell your PA you appreciate them if you see him or her today!

Persian soldiers in the 10th century wore heeled boots to improve their stability and balance when riding horses and in battle. By the 18th century, men's heels became shorter and sturdier, they eventually went out of fashion as men's footwear.
