National Jelly Bean Day

The origin of the jelly bean may be uncertain, but they became popular during the Civil War when a confectioner, William Schrafft, encouraged his customers to send them to Union soldiers. Jelly beans were the first candies sold by the pound because of their firm exterior. In the 1930s, they became closely associated with Easter due to their egg-like shape, which is now popular year-round and often comes in holiday colors.

Former U.S. President Ronald Reagan was a fan of jelly beans, and he even had them present at his inauguration. The Herman Goelitz Candy Company created a blueberry jelly bean for the first time specifically for the event. It's worth noting that one jelly bean contains around 4 calories. Why not indulge in your favorite flavor of jelly beans?

Today in History

In 1976, broadcast journalist Barbara Walters became the first female U.S. nightly network news anchor. She began her career in 1953 and started her television career in the early 1960s when she appeared on NBC. Walters was inducted into the Television Hall of Fame in 1989.

DID YOU KNOW?

Love in Voices

From Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn to Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie, the entertainment industry is full of co-stars who fell in love. A notable example is Wayne Allwine and Russi Taylor, the longtime voices of Mickey and Minnie Mouse. After Taylor won the role of Minnie in 1986, their friendship blossomed into romance once both obtained divorces. They married in 1991, keeping their relationship private, but their affection shone through during joint interviews, highlighted by Allwine's musical serenades.
