National Physician Assistant Day

In 1965, Dr. Eugene Stead of Duke Medical Center created the profession that we now know as physician assistants or PAs. Two years later, on October 6, 1967, the first PAs graduated from Duke University, and since then, tens of thousands of people have carried on this very important profession. PAs make healthcare more accessible, seeing over 10.4 million patients weekly. PAs work in all medical settings and specialties, bringing essential care to patients everywhere.

PAs are invaluable aids to physicians and general practitioners, so today and every October 6th, it's important that we celebrate and recognize them. Tell your PA you appreciate them if you see him or her today!

Today in History

In 1965, The Supremes released the single “I Hear a Symphony” from the album of the same name. The song reached number 1 on the Billboard Hot 100 and stayed there for 2 weeks. It was the group’s 6th number-one hit. The Supremes were signed by Motown Records in 1961.

DID YOU KNOW?

Poor Richard's Ale-manac

Benjamin Franklin had quite the sense of humor when it came to drinking! In 1737, he created his infamous "Drinker's Dictionary," a playful collection of 228 slang phrases for being tipsy. Among the gems, you'll find classics like "tipsy" and "cock eyed," as well as the hilarious "he's at a thump over the head with Samson's jawbone." It's a fun glimpse into his "spirited" side of his personality!
