Cliché Day

Often overused to the point where people can't stand them anymore, clichés can drive people crazy, so it makes sense that we dedicate a whole day to celebrating them. Cliché Day can be fun if you embrace it. Who created this day is unknown, but that's just how the cookie crumbles.

Clichés convey your point easily and quickly. If the cat doesn't have your tongue, take a moment to think of some of your favorite clichés, work them into your conversations throughout the day, and see just how time flies.

After all, the day has already been named a holiday, so there's no use crying over spilled milk. See how that last cliché got in, just in the nick of time?

Today in History

In 1975, Chris Evert became the first tennis player to achieve the number one ranking when the WTA Tour rankings debuted. She held the top spot for the first 26 weeks. Evert won 18 Grand Slam singles titles during her career, making her one of the most successful players in history.

DID YOU KNOW?

Hollywood's Biggest Bomb

Did you know the 1956 film, The Conqueror, is considered one of the most ill-fated movies ever made? Beyond the strange casting of John Wayne as Genghis Khan, the film was shot in Utah, downwind from a nuclear testing site. Of the 220 cast and crew members, an alarming 91 later developed cancer, including stars John Wayne, Susan Hayward, and Agnes Moorehead. This tragic legacy has led many to label it a "cursed" production.
