No Beard Day

Do you have a beard and are looking for a good excuse to shave it? How about the fact that today is No Beard Day? Beards have been around forever, but seem to have gained more popularity in the last decade or so. Some people have had them for so long that they don't even remember what they looked like without one.

Celebrate this holiday by finding out what you look like under all that facial hair. You might be pleasantly surprised! Today is also a good day to shave it off if your lady friend isn't fond of it. If you're worried about removing all your facial hair at once, you could always keep your mustache!

Today in History

In 1921, American inventor Charles Strite was granted a U.S. patent for the automatic pop-up toaster. He named his invention the “Toastmaster” and set up the Waters Genter company to manufacture and market it. Selling 1 million units annually by 1930, toasters became very popular.

DID YOU KNOW? The Ultimate Wake-Up Call

Cruise ships have a unique "Dead Man's Switch" in the bridge, requiring an officer to press a button every few minutes. If it's not pressed, an alarm sounds, and if left unanswered, it can trigger a full-ship distress call. This is a crucial safety measure to ensure a crew member is always conscious and alert while at the helm.
