World Television Day

Who doesn't love watching television? OK, so there may be a few people here and there who don't, but most people enjoy sitting down with a drink and/or snack and watching a good TV show or movie. The United Nations created World Television Day in 1996 to recognize television as having an increased impact on decision-making as well as being an ambassador for the entertainment industry. It serves as a symbol of communication and globalization that educates, informs, entertains, and influences our decisions and opinions. The internet has connected us in ways we didn't expect and perhaps could not have imagined, but on World Television Day, we remember that television was there first and paved the way for what was to come. So, if you're enjoying television today, you can thank the UN for creating this holiday and Philo Taylor Farnsworth for inventing the television in 1927!

DID YOU KNOW?

From Fuel to Fishsticks

Did you know school lunches transformed significantly after WWII? During the war, lunches, formalized by the 1946 National School Lunch Act, focused on providing basic nutrition to ensure national security. As baby boomers entered school, the program began using agricultural surpluses. This shifted menus toward convenience and processed foods like fish sticks, pizza, and chocolate milk. The goal moved from basic wartime nutrition to feeding a booming student population with readily available, mass-produced American food products.
