International Mountain Day

From the Rockies to the Swiss Alps, mountains can be some of the most breathtaking features on earth. Not only are they nice to look at, but they are also places where people can escape when they need to get away and become one with nature. Though they may not move, they are always changing, which makes them so unique.

Established in December 2003 by the United Nations General Assembly, International Mountain Day was created to bring awareness to all the things we rely on mountains for, such as all of the flora and fauna that call them home. Celebrate International Mountain Day by traveling to a mountain nearby or simply telling someone about mountains you have seen or camped in.

DID YOU KNOW?

Moates to Monet

Did you know the Louvre, the world's most visited art museum, wasn't built to house masterpieces but to repel invaders? Originally constructed in the late 12th century under King Philip II, the Louvre was a formidable fortress, complete with a moat and a central keep. Its primary mission was to defend the western edge of Paris from military threats. It only began its transformation into a lavish royal palace centuries later, before finally becoming an iconic home for art.
