A'phabet Day

Get the L out today because it is A'phabet Day, otherwise known as No "L" Day. Though today is a day for puns and pun enthusiasts since No "L" Day is a play on the word Noel, puns have been around for ages, with the earliest evidence showing that they came from ancient Egypt, where they were used to interpret dreams and describe myths.

Shakespeare and O. Henry were two people from the past who took much delight in playing with the meanings of words. Nowadays, we just use puns as an excuse to make up silly holidays.

Try to avoid pronouncing the letter L today, or if you have some funny puns of your own, share them with someone you know!
