National Good Memory Day

Good Memory Day is observed on January 19 every year, to cherish good moments from our past and present while making new ones for the future. As the name suggests, this day is also the perfect occasion to test how good your memory is. Human memory has been a topic of study since the time of Aristotle. He was the first individual to compare the human mind to a blank slate and advocated that human beings are a total of their experiences. Although the human brain is capable of developing memories right in the womb, most people can't trace childhood memories before the age of three or four. Come up with a memory game based on major childhood events, plan a fun day out with your family, or make that pending call to your best friend today. And show some love to someone struggling with their own memory/memories.

Today in History

In 1977, shortstop Ernie Banks was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame. He spent his entire 19-year Major League Baseball career with the Chicago Cubs. Banks won two MVP awards, and he was a 14-time All-Star. He hit over 40 home runs in 5 different seasons and retired in 1971.

DID YOU KNOW? Nature's Performers

Some male songbirds sing more than 2,000 times each day. Unlike humans, who sing using their vocal cords, songbirds produce sound in their syrinx, an organ with two bronchial tubes that can be independently controlled. This unique physical feature allows them to create a wide variety of sounds and songs.
