National Honesty Day

Today, we are encouraged to be truthful about everything. Since honesty goes a long way in instilling confidence, it challenges us to be honest in our actions and words, no matter who we are talking to. We all know the different kinds of lies - we may withhold details to spare someone's feelings, fudge the truth just a little, or tell an all-out whopper! National Honesty Day reminds us to be truthful and transparent in all we do. M. Hirsh Goldberg, a former press secretary and author of the Book of Lies, created this holiday as a contrast to all the foolishness that April Fools' Day brings. From housewives to politicians, it's a day for everyone to stay away from lies. Try to answer questions truthfully all day long. Discuss honesty with your children and grandchildren, and explain why honesty is always the best policy!

DID YOU KNOW? Bald Eagles Socially Monogamous

Following a kamikaze courtship ritual in which two birds lock talons and tumble end over end until they nearly hit the ground, the male and female settle into a period of domestic bliss marked by Dad's willingness to undertake incubation and feeding duties. The "divorce" rate for eagles is less than 5%, according to scientists. While they spend large chunks of the year alone, bald eagles mark their fidelity with a long-term commitment to nest building.
