National Chocolate Chip Day

If you love chocolate chips, this is your big day! May 15th is National Chocolate Chip Day, but have you ever wondered where those delightful morsels came from? You can thank one curious and creative baker. In 1937, while working at the Toll House Inn, Ruth Graves Wakefield of Whitman, Massachusetts, decided to add some chocolate to the cookies she was making. She added cut-up chunks of a semi-sweet Nestle chocolate bar to a cookie recipe. The cookies were a huge success, and in 1939, Wakefield signed an agreement with Nestle to add her recipe to the chocolate bar's packaging. In exchange for the recipe, Wakefield received a lifetime supply of chocolate. And, you guessed it, Toll House cookies were named for the inn where they were created.

DID YOU KNOW?

Tum Tum Tums!

In 1928, a Missouri pharmacist, Jim Howe, developed a chalky tablet to treat his wife's indigestion. Nellie Howe gave out samples to seasick travelers on a cruise ship. The tablets were well received. Soon, Howe began to sell his acid relievers. Tums hit pharmacy shelves two years later and sold for 10 cents per roll. The name was chosen from a radio contest in St. Louis, where 99% of Tums have been made for nearly 100 years.
