World Bicycle Day

It's June third, which means it is World Bicycle Day! Invented over 200 years ago, bicycles come in all shapes, colors, and sizes and are still a popular holiday gift today, especially for kids. Currently, there are over two billion bicycles on our planet, meaning that every one in three people is a bicycle owner. Since bikes are pedal-powered, they are good for the environment, and they are also an excellent form of exercise.

Bicyclists can burn anywhere from 300 to 800 calories an hour, depending on how fast they ride. According to famous comedian and actor Robin Williams, "riding a bicycle is the closest you can get to flying."

Today in History

In 2002, Tiger Woods claimed his 73rd PGA Tour victory. He beat Andrés Romero and Rory Sabbatine with 2 strokes in the Memorial Tournament at Muirfield Village GC. He won his 1st major in 1997, was the #1 golfer soon after, and dominated the game through the 2000s.

DID YOU KNOW? Not so French Afterall

French fries are not French. A village in Belgium would catch fish in a local river and fry them. When the river was frozen, sliced potatoes were used. Americans discovered fried potatoes during World War I. Since the Belgian Army spoke French, French fries became known as "French fries." As a side here, they are served with ketchup or other toppings, but in Belgium, the way to serve them is with cooked mussels or with a fried egg on top.
