International Rock Day

We will, we will ROCK YOU! No, not that kind of rock—literal rocks, from the ground. International Rock Day celebrates rocks of all kinds, whether they are igneous, sedimentary, or metamorphic. Rocks might seem unimportant because they are so plentiful; after all, the Earth's crust is solid rock, but the first human beings used common rocks as tools, weapons, and everyday utensils thousands of years ago, and other cultures used them as jewelry or decorations on clothes.

Structures made from rocks like Stonehenge, which were constructed as a way to connect with the divine, are still standing after more than five thousand years and continue to fascinate humans today. One last fact to rock your world: Mars has rocks that are similar to the ones on our planet.

Today in History

In 1939, Frank Sinatra made his recording debut with “From the Bottom of My Heart” and “Melancholy Mood,” a collaboration with The Harry James Orchestra. With more than 150 million records sold worldwide, he’d go on to become one of the best-selling artists of all time.

DID YOU KNOW?

2000 Eggs

The queen bee is responsible for the entire population of her hive. The process of laying one egg takes only a few seconds, and a queen is capable of laying up to 2,000 honey bee eggs within a single day. A young queen lays her eggs using an organized pattern, placing each egg next to others within a cell known as a "brood chamber". Most of her eggs are fertilized and will become female workers.

If you get stuck, try asking yourself "Where can I place number X in this row or column?" Scan to see if the number is already in that row, column, or box.
