Take a Monkey to Lunch Day

Take a what to where?! No way! Take a Monkey to Lunch Day has celebrated and brought awareness to all things monkey-related, including apes and lemurs, since 2000. Alright, so you don't have to take a monkey to lunch or join a monkey for lunch. Whew! Instead of worrying about having your fruit stolen, let's learn about these incredible creatures.

Miss Baker, a squirrel monkey, and Able, a rhesus monkey, were the first non-human primates to make a successful launch and return to space back in 1959. Koko was a western lowland gorilla that allegedly learned more than 1,000 words in adapted sign language. She was also known to have loved her kitten, which she named "All Ball." Quit monkeying around and have a great day!

DID YOU KNOW? How Hollywood Came to Be

Hollywood became the movie capital it is today thanks to filmmakers traveling west to escape Thomas Edison's dominance over movie production. Edison's monopoly was weakened in Western states like California, where many independent filmmakers settled and made their mark in the newly incorporated neighborhood of Hollywood. In 1915, Edison's monopoly was finally busted by the Supreme Court, and the film industry began to thrive in Hollywood.
