National Bow Tie Day

The bow tie isn't for everyone, but some people just look right in one. Bow ties go in and out of style and come in many flavors. What's dapper for one is humorous for another, and scholarly for someone else. The bow tie dates back to Croats who would tie a scarf around their necks to hold their shirts closed. This fashion statement found favor in France and spread worldwide.

Both men and women can wear bow ties, but the most famous wearers include James Bond, Bill Nye, Groucho Marx, Orville Redenbacher, newscaster Charles Osgood, oh, and Donald Duck, too! So go ahead and "tie one on" today, or simply clip one on!

DID YOU KNOW?

Give that Bird a Medal

Pigeons are more intelligent than you may think. Some pigeons were even awarded a military medal in 1943 for their heroic actions in the U.K.'s Royal Air Force during World War II. They delivered messages that led to the rescue of aircrews. One pigeon, Winkie, flew 120 miles to alert the air base, leading to the rescue of the flight crews. In total, 32 messenger pigeons have received the Dickin Medal for their gallantry, alongside 38 dogs, four horses, and one cat.
