Pins and Needles Day

Pins and Needles Day is celebrated every November 27th to mark the 1937 Broadway premiere of “Pins and Needles.” Produced by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, this pro-labor musical ran for three years and 1,108 performances. The cast was composed of real factory employees, including garment cutters, basters, and sewing machine operators who pursued theater in their off-hours.

The storyline focused on 1930s workers fighting to protect their livelihoods while highlighting critical issues like fair wages, safer working conditions, and political expression. The show achieved such sensational success that the working-class cast members were able to leave their factory jobs and perform full-time for eight weeks.

Today in History

In 1920, “The Mark of Zorro” was shown in New York. It was the first American superhero film and starred Douglas Fairbanks, who started acting as a teenager. He co-founded United Artists in 1919 and the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in 1927, and retired from acting in 1934.

DID YOU KNOW?

Nature, Nurture, Notes

Did you know that the rare ability of perfect pitch is far less common than you might think? Possessed by only about 1 in 10,000 people, it's the skill of identifying a musical note by name without a reference tone. While famous musicians like Mozart and Ella Fitzgerald had it, it's not purely a gift you're born with. Scientists believe it's a combination of a genetic predisposition and, crucially, early musical training during a critical developmental period.
